at wagamama, we believe in eating well. that means feeding your body and your soul. that's why we do things differently here. we look to japanese tradition in everything from our street-food inspired cooking to our uncompromising culture. we sweat the details, pursue perfection and believe that the little things make a big difference. knowing that fresh and delicious, hearty and satisfying can also mean fast. we ask our guests to do things a little differently too. to eat our food as soon as it is cooked and enjoy it at its best. to pull up a chair at a communal table so everyone gets a place quickly. to share a meal and maybe a few ideas, because eating well is about more than filling your belly
